Excerpt from The University of New Brunswick Memorial Volume: Published on the Occasion of the One Hundred and Fiftieth Anniversary of the Granting of the First Charter of Incorporation, February 12th, 1800 Our universities are legacies of our British system. These institutions put together fragment by fragment are the sources of our strength. They are expressions of tolerance, of our freedom from the violent and defiling prejudices of Race, our freedom of expression of faith and our freedom of worship. All these benefits flow from the British political structure, from the British universities and their religious institutions. Throughout the centuries Britain has dared her weakness against the embattled strength of dazzling European autocracies. She has fed her poverty over the rich acres beyond the seas. She has sown her children broadcast upon the untested soil. This political greatness has been twice tried of late in fire and tempest which have twice been checked. Two empires have been built up in critical periods in history. The first empire was hewn out as soon as the Parliament in Westminster...

Reviews

This publication is amazing. It is definitely basic but shocks in the fifty percent of your publication. You wont feel monotony at anytime of your own time (that's what catalogues are for concerning if you question me).
