Developed the solid faculties, judgment and reason. Constituted phonic method of spelling languages, made studies interesting in themand object teaching, gave preference to modem selves; primary education not neglected. 5. The universities may be regarded as the natural development of the cathedral and monastery schools; but the first universities, however, grew out of organizations of scholars and stu dents who joined themselves together for the pur pose of study. The oldest institution was that of Salerno, Italy, which taught medicine only; the next was at Bologna. The greatest university of the middle ages was that of Paris, and it was the first to have a faculty in philosophy. Universities were founded at Oxford, Cambridge, Vienna, Cologne and at other places. These institutions were granted special privileges of government and authority and acquired great influence. They stimulated a desire for learning and have contributed greatly to the advance of civilization. 6. o) The act of emphasizing liberty of thought and conscience; specifically--the cultivation of the languages, literature and history of Greece and Rome, b) Dante, Petrarch, Boccaccio, Agricola, Reuchlin, Erasmus. 7. The institutions at Halle date from 1695 and were founded by August Herman Francke. At present there are no less than twenty-five different enterprises connected with the institutions, including a free school for boys and one for girls, a pedagogium, a Latin school, a real-school, an...
