RareBooksClub. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 32 pages. LC Number: KF26 . F6355 2009b OCLC Number: (OCOlc)705382203 Subject: Security, International. Excerpt: . . . Alliance in Afghanistan and beyond. The Alliance must work to find consensus on defining the scope of its responsibilities and missions. Threats including nuclear proliferation, cyber warfare, energy security, piracy, even pandemic health problems will continue to test Alliance members; yet NATO has limited resources and capacities to deal with these non-traditional challenges. NATO members must clearly determine how and where it can be effective in meeting the wide range of 21st Century threats. NATO must also determine how it wants to interact with non-NATO members and institutions. NATO-Russia relations will be the most pressing among these institutional relationship questions, but NATOs strategic interaction with the European Union, with China, and with organizations like the UN will also figure prominently in this debate. In short, NATO has a number of critical strategic questions to ponder in the near term. It will not be easy to find consensus on these issues, which is why it is so important that the full Senate confirm the nominations of two officials who will play an important role in this effort--Dr. Ivo Daalder to be the U. S. Ambassador to NATO and Dr. Phil Gordon to be the Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs. I hope the Senate will move quickly on these nominations. Today, we have a distinguished panel to explore these critical issues. Each of our panelists has broad expertise and decades of experience on NATO and Transatlantic relations. Their resumes speak for themselves, but Id like to very briefly introduce them. First, we have Dr. Daniel Hamilton, the Director of the Center for Transatlantic Relations at the School for Advanced International...
