Excerpt: . . . that Mr. Lochridge then referred to the pawnbrokers act, and upon being shown a copy, asked questions respecting the law in detail, which respondent went through carefully, explaining it to him fully; that some other questions were asked by Lochridge, regarding the effect of a bill of sale, where chattels, the possession of which could be delivered, had been pledged for a loan, all of which were answered. The last interview between these parties occurred a few days later, which, according to the evidence of respondent, is that Mr. Lochridge called at his office, and he commenced to tell him that he had looked up the other questions, when Lochridge interrupted him, saying he would see him again, and went out. The entry on respondents book of the charge against Lochridge, so he says, was made about the 13th day of January, 1898, and after the last interview. It is itemized substantially as it appears upon the bill rendered. This bill, omitting the heading, reads as follows: To consultation in re evading pawnbrokers act--city ordinances--state laws, etc. In loaning money on pledges, criminal liability under state laws for acts done on U. S. Reservation--right of party to redeem goods on which loan is made when bill of sale is given--passing on and sufficiency of forms---100. 00. The entry on respondents book is at page 148. This book, he says, contains all the accounts with his clients for business transacted at his office. Pages 145...
