CHAPTER 8 GROWTH IN TERMS OF WATER AND SOLIDS 1. In the body as a whole. 2. In the larger divisions of the body and the organs. 3. In the brain and spinal cord. Water and solids 1) in the body as a whole and 2) in the larger divisions and the organs. Data on this head have been published by Lowrey (13) and are here presented. With the exception of one of the old rats the animals used for the following table 75 were reared at the University of Missouri. They were fed on chopped corn with a daily ration of bread soaked in whole milk and once a week a small quantity of fresh beef was given them. All were sound except some of the older animals which suffered from infected lungs--but not to such a degree as to affect their general nutrition or vigor. Table 75 is based on table 1, Lowrey (13). The data for the two sexes are combined. In the original the range of the observations is given and also the number of animals used in each instance. In the present table the ranges are omitted and the number of animals is given for the body weight (net) only. The other determinations for the systems and organs were based on about the same number of animals as were used for the body weight, except in the case of the...
